

Novel Coronavirus Forces Closures; Tribal Council Issues Rules to Keep Community Safe

On March 24, to help protect its community from the novel coronavirus (also known as COVID-19), the Port Gamble S'Klallam Tribal government closed down all—except the most essential—services. This is expected to remain in effect until, at least, April 24.

In a letter to families, dated March 24, PGST Chairman Jeromy Sullivan outlined several rules Tribal Council was immediately enacting to help keep community members safe:

- Stay in your home or yard and severely limit contact with anyone outside your home. Elders should reach out to designated family members or tribal employees for any non-emergency need.
- All parks and playgrounds will be closed as they cannot be properly sanitized. Closed parks include: the skatepark, neighborhood parks, basketball courts, and baseball fields.
- No gatherings of groups over two (2) people unless they are from your immediate household.
- Do not share or sell food to those outside your household. This includes baked goods, clams, or any prepared foods.

- Please do not host parties or meals with people who live outside of your home. Keep your kids and teens at home.
- Please do not allow sleepovers or childcare in your home.
- Only leave the reservation if absolutely necessary. This limits outside contamination.
- Going outside for walks or exploration around the reservation is allowed alone or with members of your household only.
- Harvesting food and gathering medicine is allowed alone or with members of your household only.

Also implemented was a closure of Point Julia's beach except for harvesting.

These rules were approved by Tribal Council on the recommendation of the Emergency Response Team, which includes medical, admin, and leadership staff who are best suited to design strategies to help manage the coronavirus outbreak.

So community members can get the information and help they need during this challenging time, the Emergency Response Team has put in place several communications protocols, including a COVID-19 Health Alert page on the PGST website (www.pgst.nsn.us/COVID) and an Emergency Operations Center, which can be reached at 360-297-9689. Community members are asked to call this number for any questions or needs they have while government operations have been suspended.

One of the few government departments still open on a regular schedule is the Medical Clinic. Dr. Luke McDaniels and his team responded to the outbreak early and set up a COVID-19 testing facility on campus grounds isolated from the main clinic.

COVID-19

While the Medical Clinic has been able to test for COVID-19 for several weeks, like many clinics across the state and country, they've had some difficulty obtaining supplies on a timely basis. To ensure those who need the test receive it, they have put in place a strict pre-screening procedure and ask anyone who thinks they should be tested to call 360-297-2840.

As the scope of this outbreak started to emerge, the Emergency Response Team began to meet on a daily basis to create strategies to protect the community through the use of risk management and social/physical distancing protocol. Early on, the Team advised Elders to stay home and made recommendations to cancel all Tribal events and staff travel for at least 90 days.

Fast and decisive action has paid off: as of the end of the March, there are no positive cases of COVID-19 among the PGST community. The Emergency Response Team is working hard to keep it that way.

PGST has responded more quickly to the threat of COVID-19 than many state or local governments. This follows the pattern of other tribes across Washington state, some of which were among the first in the nation to issue stay-at-home orders to protect community members.

Tribal Council and the Emergency Response Team have had to grapple with some difficult decisions, ones that go against the culture and attitudes of the S'Klallam people to be warm, loving, and inviting. They know though that the decisions they are making could quite literally mean the difference between life and death.

In a video address to the community on March 13, Chairman Jeromy Sullivan said, "All of our lives are going to change for a while. It will be difficult, but necessary. Tribal Council and leadership are continuing to collaborate with health department staff to monitor this situation and make decisions to protect our community. This is my number one priority and I'm asking for your help. Consider your actions and how they might affect others. Wash your hands. Cancel travel. Stay home. Most importantly, take care of yourself and your loved ones. If you need help, please do not hesitate to call. We're all in this together."

Point Casino & Hotel, other PGST businesses, suspend operations; Heronswood cancels events

On March 16, Washington Governor Jay Inslee, responding to the threat of the coronavirus, issued an Executive Order closing all bars, restaurants, and entertainment venues. In response, Noo-Kayet Development Corporation shut down operations of The Point Casino & Hotel, as well as all on-property restaurants, as of March 18.

Soon after, the state's "Stay Home, Stay Healthy" directive was put into place, ordering the closure of non-essential businesses and asking Washington state residents to stay home as much as possible.

To protect its customers and staff, NKDC decided to close the espresso stand and deli on property at the Gliding Eagle Marketplace, which is running on reduced hours from 9 am to 7 pm daily. Gas pumps remain on 24 hours a day for credit/debit transactions only.

Kountry Korner has closed its convenience store, but its gas pumps remain open for credit/debit transactions.

High Point remains open from 9 am to 7 pm daily.

NKDC is monitoring the situation and will make decisions to reopen properties only after they can be assured that it is safe to do so.

Also affected by the coronavirus outbreak are operations at Heronswood, which is managed by the Port Gamble S'Klallam Foundation. While the Garden is continuing to bloom on its spring schedule, events, such as various classes and the Spring Plant Sale (originally slated for April 4), have had to be cancelled. Also postponed until 2021 is an art exhibit by Duane and Betty Pasco.

Héronswood's seasonal public opening has also been delayed and a new date has not yet been determined. This and any other informational postings about the Garden in Spring can be found on the Events page of Heronswoodgarden.org.

PGST in the Time of COVID-19:

Essential facts you and your family need to know!

What is COVID-19 and who is at risk of getting it?

COVID-19 is a virus, also known as “coronavirus disease 2019.”

Everyone is at risk of contracting COVID-19. While it can be particularly harmful to older people and those with underlying health conditions, such as heart disease, lung disease, or diabetes, people of any age and those that are healthy can become ill and suffer moderate to severe cases.

In addition, the disease has a long incubation period up to 14 days, so people can be carriers, but present with no symptoms. Because of this, medical professionals urge everyone to act as if they might have it and practice social/physical distancing to minimize risk.

What are the symptoms of COVID-19?

Most people who contract COVID-19 experience symptoms that include fever (100.5 Degree F or 37.8 degree C), dry cough, shortness of breath, and sore throat. Other symptoms can include body aches, headache, chills, and fatigue. Nasal congestion or a runny nose are rare in those suffering from COVID-19.

What should I do if I start showing symptoms of COVID-19?

Call the Medical Clinic to set up a screening and a possible test. DO NOT walk into the Clinic. Call first.

How can I protect myself and others from COVID-19?

The best way to protect yourself and loved ones from COVID-19 is by taking some simple common-sense precautions, including:

- Following rules set by Tribal Council to protect the community. You can find these on the front page article in this issue and by visiting www.pgst.nsn.us/COVID.
- Stay home, if you can. Stick to essential errands only, like the grocery store or medical appointments, and avoid being in groups of people.
- Practice social/physical distancing, which includes maintaining a distance of six feet when you must be around others.
- Do not travel. If you have a trip or vacation planned for outside the area, please cancel or postpone until restrictions have been lifted.
- If you live on reservation, limit trips off reservation. If you live off reservation, do not come on reservation, unless requested by medical staff or tribal leadership.
- Stay away from people over 60 or those with underlying health conditions.
- Wash your hands frequently with warm, soapy water for at least 20 seconds. See opposite page for instructions!
- Cover your mouth with tissues whenever you sneeze, and discard used tissues in the trash.
- Clean frequently touched surfaces.
- Do not give handshakes and avoid other direct physical contact.
- Do not provide, sell, or consume communal food.

Filing for Unemployment:

Who's eligible, how to apply, and more

If, like a lot of people right now, you find yourself laid off or furloughed with no or reduced pay due to the coronavirus outbreak, you might be eligible for unemployment benefits through the state of Washington.

Applying for unemployment, especially if it's your first time, can seem like a daunting process, but the state's website tries to make it as straightforward as possible by answering frequently asked questions about the benefits, the process, and more.

What are unemployment-insurance benefits?

Unemployment benefits partially replace your regular earning and help you meet expenses while you look for another job. They are not based on financial need. While receiving benefits, it's your responsibility to get back to work as quickly as you can. Note: The Coronavirus Relief Package approved by Congress extends benefits to people who otherwise might not have been eligible. Please see opposite page for details.

How do I apply for benefits?

You can apply for benefits online at <https://secure.esd.wa.gov/home/>. This is the much faster process and is encouraged.

You can also call the claims center at 800-318-6022. If you call, be prepared for long wait time. Call to the Claims Center are open Monday – Friday from 8 am – 4 pm as follows:

- Monday: New applications for those with Social Security numbers ending in 0-3.
- Tuesday: New applications for those with Social Security numbers ending in 0-6.
- Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday: Everyone can submit new applications.

These restrictions apply to calls only. Anyone can submit an application online anytime.

How long can I get benefits?

Your claim is good for a “benefit year”, which is 52 weeks, beginning with the week you file your application. You cannot file a new claim in Washington until your benefit year is over, even though you may have received all of your benefits. Most claims received between 13 to 26 weeks of benefits.

How much will my weekly payment be?

Several factors are taken into account to determine your weekly check amount. You can review these and calculate your benefit at <https://esd.wa.gov/unemployment/calculate-your-benefit>.

May I have my benefits deposited directly into my bank account?

Yes. If you apply online for a new claim, you will be offered the option of direct deposit.

I did not work last week. Can I backdate my claim?

You may backdate your claim by one week when you apply for benefits online. If you request to backdate your claim by more than one week, you will be asked to provide additional information.

As the department has been particularly busy with the current crisis, they have said they may backdate claims further without additional information if the claimant was unable to get through.

Can I collect unemployment benefits if I work part-time or if my hours were cut, but I wasn't laid off?

Yes. If you work part-time, we reduce your benefits. You must also still meet the job-search requirements. Working part-time usually extends the number of weeks you can draw benefits.

Where can I find more information?

On Washington state Employment Security Department website, located at esd.wa.gov. If you do a Google search for “tips for filing for unemployment in Washington state” it should be the first result.

The Federal Coronavirus Relief Package:

What does it mean for you?

On Friday, March 27, the bill that allocates $2 trillion in aid to deal with the economic fallout from the coronavirus pandemic was signed. The package includes relief for small businesses, hospitals, and various industries that have been hardest hit, but what does it mean for the average American?

The bill includes one-time payments of $1200 for adults, plus an additional $500 for every child in a household under the age of 16. Whether an adult is eligible for the payment depends on income: single adults with an income of $75,000 or less a year or married couple earning less than $150,000, will receive the full amount. This is based on a taxpayer’s 2019 return, if filed. If not, it will be based on 2018 income.

Those with income more than the threshold amount will see a reduced payment up to earnings of $99,000 for single people and married people jointly earning $198,000.

There is no application to receive the payments, which are expected to be issued starting mid-April. The payments will be made via direct deposit if the IRS has bank account information on file (e.g. this information is provided when taxes are filed for refunds or payments). Otherwise paper checks will be sent and should arrive by the end of April or the beginning of May.

This federal bill also expands unemployment benefits for those who find themselves unemployed or under-employed due to coronavirus-related reasons, and wraps in workers not usually eligible for unemployment benefits, including the self-employed, gig workers, independent contractors, and those who must stay home to care for a child or family member whose school, daycare center, or other facility has shut down due to the coronavirus. All eligible workers will receive an extra $600 a week above and beyond their state-issued unemployment check. This will last up to four months.

The bill also suspends payments through September 30, 2020 on student loans held by the federal government. According to the Institute for College Access & Success, 90% of loans are eligible. Check with lenders for more information.
